Bangkok sold for $1,859

Thursday, 14 June 2007

Bangkok has sold $1,859 on Weblo, an online parallel universe based on real properties, cities and states.

In what the website calls "a virtual real estate boom," California recently sold for $53,000, Florida sold for $18,047 and now the Bangkok Metropolitan Area has sold for $1,859 in real money.

"It's like Monopoly on steroids. Every property, city and state from the real world is for sale at Weblo.com," says Rocky Mirza, CEO and co-founder of Weblo.com. "This is social networking with commerce, where members finally get paid for their popularity. Before Weblo.com only website founders and shareholders profited."

Weblo.com has been compared to Second Life but that game is based on the sale of fantasy islands. Weblo is the only virtual world where every real city, state and property is for sale.
